Wall street resound.

Ranged around the statute were the masters of ceremonies, dignitaries of the street, orator and poet of the day, eight choristers in black, with white gloves, and a few brokers. Never was gloves, and a few brokers. Never was there such a seene. The pitway was filled to its nimost with a crowd of brokers, among whom were many of the prominent men of Wall Street. The statue stood in the gallery of the long room. It was a tall and dignified statue, concealed from view by a curtain. Its body was covered by a sheet. The orator, Mr. S. V. White, then came forward and paid a glowing tribute to the illustrious man in whose honor a statute was now to be unveiled.

Other fluids, it was known, could make us see double, but it was remarkable that this great man by the employment of water was able not only to see double, but to make things double themselves. [Immense applause.] But he would no longer delay the gratification in store for the vast company before him, and or the vast company before him, and would now cause the image to appear would now cause the image to appear in all the majesty of its unrivalled proportions. As he ceased, a gentleman solemnly arose, and reading from a sheet of legal cap paper, said: 'In the name of the United States, and Buenos Ayres, and of the Supreme Court, I enjoin you from further proceedings in this matter.' He was put off the gallery for daring to read an injunction.

The great American flag, which had served to conceal the statue, now fell, amid the wildest enthusiasm, and displayed a figure Clothed in white samile, mystic, wonderful like King Arthur's arm from out the bosom of the lake. Its 'countenance was paic yet nobe, its eyes were full of speculation; one hand was gauntisted in a boxing-glove, and the other held out a watering pot, on which was plainly legible '207.' What language is adequate to describe the frenzy that swayed the long room at the instant the drapery parted from this effigy? 'The choir now sung 'My country 'tis of Thee,' with the retain of 'He's a joily good fellow,' which so pleased the statue that it gave unmistakable signs of its gratification, like an intoxicated commendatore in the last act of 'Don Giovanni,' and then disappeared.

The returns from the State of the elec-tion of delegates to the Constitutional the resurns from the Sate of the steption of delegates to the Constitutional Convention leave no longer any doubt that a majority of that body will be composed of gentlemen who have always acted and voted with the Republican party. There are some ten or twelve delegates who have been elected in Republican districts without particular reference to their political proclivtitles. In several Republican districts the regular nominees of the party have been defeated by Independent Republicans, and, in other districts, Democcrats and Republicans have been elected unanimously, both parties uniting in the election of a competent person, without much reference to his party politics. As a political body, it may be somewhat difficult to draw arriet party lines, though, as we have stated, a majority of the delegates are gentlemen who have always acted with the Republican party. Though in some instances very excellent gentlemen have been defeated, the people generally have selected the beat material that was offered them; without reference to party. A score or more of the delegates offered them; without reference to par-ty. A score or more of the delegates chosen have held judicial offices, as many more are leading members of the hany more are leading memoersof user, and some five or six were delegates in the convention of 1847, which iramed the present constitution of the State, and a few were in the convention of 1862. As a whole, the convention will be the ablest and most experienced body of public men which has ever met in this State.

On the day referred to, the air was raw and chiliy, and a dense fog hung over the city, being thickest over a low, marshy field near the place. Just before the hour of sunset, the sun peoped out from behind the thick clouds which had obscured it the thick clouds which had obsoured it all day long, and the mirage appeared. The trees, underbrush, the railway cars, and a portion of the foundery on the ontakirts of the city, seemed hung upside down on the clouds; even persons who were walking along the railroad track had their images reflected in mid air, with their heads to the earth

The unveiling of the Vanderbilt statue to-day developed a vast personal dislike to the Commodore. Throughout the city there was a general outburst of feeling against the Railroad King, and the ceremonies were mainly attended by street boys, corner loafers and some third-rate politicians. Even among these it was considered monstrous for a man to spend $800,000 so as to get an immense bronze monument, Numerous questions were asked among the crowd why the Commodore did not build with so much money, lodginghouses for workingmen?

While the ceremonies were progressing this afternoon the brokers had an excellent time on Wall street, where they unveiled a mock atatue.

It is entimated that the surplus wheat of the State the present year will be jully 15,000,000 bushels, while but a little of the great grain platean embraced within its limits has yet been brought under cultivation. One farmer, the past year, harvested 1,000 acres, with an iverage yield of 40 bushels to the acre. This section, while much of it is too far north for growing corn, will evidently become the Odessa of America, in the production of wheat.

Returning Prosperity-Flattering Prospects in Georgie. NEW YORK, Nov. 11.

A letter from Macon, Ga., says:

'The evidences of returning prosperity in the South, are specially noteworthy. Although the cotton crop is much less than the planters expected to gather, and the prices is much semality and the prices is much semality than they hoped to receive; yet the country generally is prosperous. During the past week a large proportion of the notes of the planters in this part of the State to their merchants and factors fall due, and not one has been protested. Every one was paid in full at tors fall due, and not one has been pro-tested. Every one was paid in full at maturity. The laborers are content-ed, and notwithstanding the recent laed, and notwithstanding the recent la-bor convention, are contracting large-ly to work away their year with the same employers. The laborers who made these re-arrangements were well and fairly treated, and were liberally compensated. The country is perfectly tranquil. There are remarkably few cases of crime, and none of an aggra-wated character. Politics are neither spoken or thought of. The fair, the price of cotton, fertilizing and the part crop, are the all engrossing subjects for thought and discussion.'

The Convention Bill--- Andrew Job

NASHVILLE, Nov. 10. NASHVILLE, NOY, 10.

The Convention Bill still hangs fire in the Legislature, the point of difference between the two Houses being as to the number of delegates to compose the Convention. The House, in the original bill, placed the number at one hundred. The Senate amended by reducing the number to fifty. The House to-day refuses to concur. A compromise is likely to be effected by making it seventy-dye. Some of the most prominent men in the State are being nominated as delegates.

Andrew Johnson was on the floor of the House to-day, listening attentively to the discussion on the Convention Bill. It is reasonably certain he will be a delegate.

NEW YORK, NOV. 11. NEW YORK, Nov. 11.

The Evening Post says the question whether Deputy Collector Blatchford, is connected with the immense drawback frauds, recently brought to light in the New York Custom House, has been definitely settled by the investigation and examination of papers made at the Custom House, this afternoon, by Collector Grinnell and District Attorney Pierrepont The investigation demonstrated beyond doubt that an immense quantity of goods has been removed from bond upon fraudulent papers, and that ond upon fraudulent papers, and that the Government has been defrauded of not less than $800,000. The aggregate amount may resch $1,000,000. How deeply Blatchford is concerned the Government officials do not at present feel justified in making public. The frauds committed against the Government in the drawback department of the custom house, were communicated in some cases by fraudulent papers, and in another case by changing the amounts on which drawbacks were due. The frauds were conducted in the boldest possible manner, and it is therefore supposed that some one holding a responsible place under the Government was concerned the Government has been defrauded of some one holding a responsible place under the Government was concerned in them. Drawbacks were sometimes obtained to the smount of $200 or $300 for goods alleged to have been shipped on yessels that never left port. The papers on which these claims were collected had to be signed by Mr. Blatchford, formerly in charge of the Drawback Bureau and more recently in charge of the public stores. It is claimed that Mr. Blatchford fectived ten per cent. of the frauds, amounting to cent. of the frauds, amounting to $250,000. These are only part of the the frauds, however. District Attorney Plerrepont is making a thorough investigation of the matter and it is probable some important developments with be made in a few days.

Proposition to Burn the Sugar Crop. A Proposition to Burn the Sugar Crop.

NEW York, Nov. 11.

The burning of the sugar crop in Cuba, as proposed by Cespedes, in order to keep the Spaniards from using it, will cost the United States, according to Cuban estimates, from fifty to sixty million dollars in customs and income from commercial transactions. Prominent Cubans of this city are now preparing a memorial to Congress praying for the early recognition of the independence of the struggling Republic. The memorial will be extensively circulated in a few days.
